Designer's Dedication:
For all of us.

No list of Acknowledgments is ever complete,
but without some people, this book just wouldn't have been possible.
Heartfelt thanks to Cecile and Blair at SAO, Joe & Dave in the Typeshop, Ray and Billy at William R. Brown, and Ron at W.E. Jackson. Also, not least, to Preston.
Thank you all.

WHEN I first proposed this design for Portfolio 1992, I was asked (by a fellow student) "But is RISD a traditional school?" I'm sorry to say that my response then wasn't as complete as it might have been, and I would like, by way of introduction, to respond to it more completely here. ¶ No, RISD is not, in the sense intended, a "traditional" school — all its lessons do not revolve solely about the canons of classicism, nor is it mired in its nineteenth–century roots. It is my belief, however, that a yearbook, especially one entitled Portfolio, is not intended to directly represent the school; it displays the students and their creative abilities. The school may be inferred from its graduates, but it should not be the overriding concern, and certainly not be allowed to dictate the overall design. ¶ With my priorities thus decided, I set about designing to suit this task. The result is, I admit, a reflection of my preference for classical design standards, but justifiably so. In choosing a classical form, I am remaining neutral; I establish no new visual hierarchy, and remain discrete enough so as to allow the viewer to dedicate her or his full attention not on the design, but on the content of the images created or chosen to represent ourselves, the class of 1992. Please, peruse them at your leisure, and remember us.

— Sixten C. Abbot, Designer

N.B. — In Volume II, as throughout this volume, non–lining figures (1, 2, 3, etc.) were used, except in the following instances in the index: If the number I (one) appeared alone (e.g. "Apartment 1", "1 College Street"), the lining figure 1 was substituted to avoid confusion with a small capital I, as in John Smith I, or IL.

They came round the corner, and there was Eeyore's house, looking as comfy as anything.

"There you are," said Piglet.

"Inside as well as outside," said Pooh proudly.

Eeyore went inside . . . and came out again.

"It's a remarkable thing," he said. "It is my house, and I built it where I said I did, so the wind must have blown it here. And the wind blew it right over the wood, and blew it down here, and here it is as good as ever. In fact, better in places."

"Much better," said Pooh and Piglet together.

"It just shows what can be done by taking a little trouble," said Eeyore. "Do you see, Pooh? Do you see, Piglet? Brains first and then Hard Work. Look at it! That's the way to build a house," said Eeyore proudly.

He fished out a quarter and closed my hand around it without breaking his sentence or interrupting his discourse about the political implications of my collage.

"A cigarette," Peg said, "He wants a cigarette."

He stopped speaking momentarily,
his palm anticipating the tobacco
that I could not provide.

"I don't smoke."
"Funny, Rocky, I figured you for a smoker."

and he gave me a puzzled look as he received a cigarette from another classmate.
A pause…he lit up…
and the critique continued though we later discussed at length RISD's non–smoking policy.

Our debates were endless circles of contradictory statements, each trying to outsmart, outwit, or outlast the other.
We ended each one in a stale–mate, silently admiring our persistence, saying "to be continued…"
even though we never really did.

Only a few students (the stubborn ones)
braved such discussions. They were lengthy discourses, exhausting, but impressive and often times
amusing to watch.
One hour–long debate on AIDS testing and healthcare
almost reached a conclusion—
we realized that we actually agreed.
He changed his viewpoint mid–sentence and we spent another hour trying to trip up the other's argument.

"My memoirs, Rocky," he bellowed,
"I'm gonna put you in my memoirs for all to read."

and we both laughed, recalling that notorious critique turned debate on masturbation and artistic representation…
it was the only time he ever gave up on the argument.
He says it was because we needed to move
along in the crit;
I say it was because my smart–ass mouth
got him on a finer point,
perhaps he was getting embarrassed—
I could have sworn that he blushed!
I'm sure he'd argue his case on that one.

Yes, Mahler, I think this is one debate that we'll never get to finish for I cannot truly accept that the man who loved jazz and cigarettes is gone.

There is a touch of jazz inside every student
that you reached and a quarter on the table
for another cigarette…next to me I have reserved a subconscious spot on the piano bench for you whenever you feel like playing.

My teacher, my mentor, my advisor, my friend
I will always possess that which you have given me.
By the way, Mahler,
I'm a smoker now.
I guess that means another point for you.
